Our Values

What we do

What we do:

- Ensure the longevity of brass bands by focusing on continued engagement with brass bands at university level
- Innovate as an organisation, and encourage the wider sector to follow us
- Advocate for brass banding within the arts community, arts at universities, and for students and arts in wider society

We aim to achieve:

- Long term engagement with university brass bands from wider audiences, including young people, new audiences, and older brass band enthusiasts
- Increased and supported communities and networks amongst university brass bands and within the wider arts and local communities
- Personal development for the wider university community, but also for those who engage in organising UniBrass events via an increased skill set
- Increased diversity in brass bands, by focusing on the university level, with the aim of reaching demographics more representative of the wider community
- Encouraging people to continue playing from childhood into adulthood
- Excellence in everything UniBrass do
- Opportunities to create the best and most creative brass music possible at university level

We do it by:

- By being an open and welcoming community that preempts issues individuals may face, irrespective of characteristics
- By encouraging brass bands at university level to promote diversity in all they do, and ensuring we represent that diversity to them
- By fostering an encouraging environment for people to engage in brass bands, irrespective of their current abilities or previous experience
- By providing a platform for young people to engage and perform in brass music, adding to the lives of young people
- By tailoring the contest to provide an appropriate opportunity for whatever level of music they wish to achieve
- By providing a showcase for the best brass music in the world
